N. Y. ELECTION. The election in New-York occurs next month. A great whig convention is now in session at Syracuse. A correspondent of the Albany Evening Journal writes that it is a dignified and numerous assemblage of whigs from every quarter of the state. Charles W. Patterson of Chautauqua is chosen president. The canvass on the part of the whigs promises to be animated and suc-

THE COURSE OF THE WHIGS.

We have just finished the perusal of the very similar addresses of the state whig committees of Massachusetta and Connecticut which probably indicate the course the whigs are intending to pursue in those states in the present crisis Both speak out the gratification which is felt in the consummation of so many highly important measures by the extra session, but lament extremely that the most important of all has been defeated by the veto of the President. In great charity however, they seem disposed to attribute the course of the executive to conscientious scruples, rather than any wish to separate himself from the party. They discard the intolerance of denouncing the President for a difference of opinion upon a single subject, and exhort the people not to abandon themselves to the impulses of passion and crimination, and dash away the glorious fruits of the victory they have achieved, because temporarily disappointed in a single object. They assert that in the two vetoes under all the circumstances, there is not sufficient evidence that the President intends no longer to administer the government upon whig principles; but on the contrary, that | zed. The locos have called an "indignation | his public acts and declarations expressly negative any such intention. They are corrobcrated in this belief by his assurances in his their "indignation" will probably abate someveto message of his sincere desire to accomplish the wishes of the nation in relation to the currency, his sanction to the repeal of the subtreasury, and distribution bills, the selection of decided whigs to fill the places of the retiring members of the cabinet, and retaining at the head, one of the most able and devoted whigs in the nation; and also his removal of Journal will be issued every moining, Sunday all incumbents coming within the rules prescribed by Gen. Harrison, and filling their plawith those of our own party. They therefore exhort "to conciliation among friends, forbear. once to the President and support to his admin.

To the sentiments of this exhortation we most cordially subscribe, however severe the disappointment and suspicious the circumstances which have marked the course of the President, and however humiliating the disasterous consequences which have already flown from it. After the excitement and suspense which two extraordinary vetoes have given rise, have passed away, calm reflection must satisfy every one that patient endurance is the dictate of wisdom, and that nothing can be gained by indulging in denunciations of a man who for four years holds the destines of the nation in his hands, even if he were guilty. The adhesion however of every whig to the administration of John Tyler must be upon condition that he hereafter pursues whig principles and whig measures, and evinces by his conduct that he has a whig heart still beating in his bosom. The most self-sacrifising patriotism could demand no more, since the prosperity of the country is identified with the policy which the whigs have pledged themselves to pursue. late date, says:

During the war between President Jackson and that Bank, and since the downfall of the same, the whig party in Congress very ably contended that no better mode of keeping and disbursing the public revenue could be adopte it than a United States Bank, as it had been done in that menner the most part of the time since the commencement of the government, without any loss or expense whatever. But notwithstanding all remon- fers to the example of New-York, where an apstrance, President Jackson adopted the State Bank system, which worked to a charm, if we take his next message to Congress for proof; but that system was soon after condemned and abandoned, and by the same party who adopted it, and new experiments tried, while nearly every whig in Congress was urging the neces-

MARYLAND. The election for Governor and Lieut. Governor took place on Wednesday last morning, the 19th. week. A correspondent of the N. Y. Courier says, the results are such that he has no heart to write in regard to them. The returns indicate the election of Thomas, (Loco.) for Governor, which will surprise both parties. The loco majority in the city of Baltimore has increased 1,000 from last election. The loss of whig members of the legislature as far as heard from, is 13.
